

Art History

The end justifies the art work. So, no objections can be made to any work of art that ultimately helps promote the Ministat's and Tango's reputation even in the most remote corners of the laboratory world, and the ever increasing degree of recognition that the Huber company has come to enjoy has to be accepted. The mini soccer players of the football club VFR Elgersweier that play for the Ministat (and have scored many a goal) and the youth's choir of the Elgersweier music club who beat the advertising drum for the Tango fortissimo are institutions that set the tone - That is what is called collateral fame.

Tango fortissimo: The first president of Offenburg's municipal orchestra - a cultural expert and a majestic voice within the Offenburg city council - has set the second main proposition of the Tango philosophy to music. „It Takes Two to Tango“, station 3.

Tempo needs tango. With quite an uproar, Friedrich Ruf became the German motorcycle champion five times in a row, wearing a protective suit sponsored by the Tango factory (safety first) and doing promotion work for the Tango's speed. That was music in our ears, and we are wild about the commotion. Art@huber, on the other hand is more a feast for eyes and emotions. Tango piano for bon vivants:

The cultivated never regret pleasure; the uncultivated do not know what pleasure is (Oscar Wilde). Art@huber tells the story of the Tango factory, as well as the history of the differences and similarities that exist between the Tango-Alemanno and the Tango-Argentino. Guy Respaud's history of the Tango can be admired in the Tango factory's cafeteria and the Tango factory's thermodynamic works of art can be admired at www.temperierttechnik.de and at www.huber-online.com as well as in thousands of laboratories around the world. A few examples can be found in the second gallery „concrete art“. Now, though, it is time to let the hammer and chisel and the graphic art paintbrushes tell their story.
