

Water and Ice

Eberhard Stefani

"Water And Ice" from Eberhard Stefani and "Fire And Ice" - Something Elementary -from Guy Respaud act as a overture to the second act in the Handbook of Thermoregulation Technology : Refrigeration Technology and Energy. It is obvious why German technical refrigeration specialists use images of penguins, polar bears or at least ice crystals. Yet, all these images have little in common with the Tango. The Tango is more than the sum of all its details and more than conventional refrigeration technology.

Water and Ice is a commissioned work created by Eberhard Stefani for a major birthday and an unmistakable hint. Daddy Cool is an aquarian - a fitting description. The members of the dance club "Lift-That-Leg" believe that there are other import things besides the Tango. But still: the international Tangoclub (www.tango-club.de) is our utmost authority.

Filetes

The two following pictures framed by intricate decorations were due to the Tango Calendar 2002 published by Boletin del Tango (www.tangoxp.de) together with edition Graph Druckula (www.graph-druckula.de-long live the legend). The decorative fillets were originally used to decorate horse drawn carts. Water carriers as well as dairy and vegetable merchants all painted their carts. The fillets functioned as a sort of frame and flowers were painted to decorate the interior areas. The wide side boards were often covered with some folk-saying like a tango text or the title of a tango. It was common to find texts, often composed in the local dialect, written inside the fillets, like the refrain of some song, some word of wisdom, a short joke or sometimes even something of questionable character. (Jorge Muscia, Boletin del Tango No.25).
